

4	The Growth of the Republic: War and Conquest in the Third Century BCE	61
4.1	Economy, Society, Army	63
4.2	The Conquest of Central and Southern Italy	66
4.3	The Hellenization of Art and Religion	68
4.4	The Punic Wars	73
4.5	Gladiatorial Combat: Rise and Early Development	82
5	Consequences of Conquest: The Second Century BCE	89
5.1	What Was Roman Imperialism?	91
5.2	Conquests from 200 to 148 BCE: Defensive Imperialism	93
5.3	Conquests from 148 to 133 BCE: Conscious Imperialism	95
5.4	War and Conquest: 133–96 BCE	100
5.5	Roman Triumphs: Spectacles of Military Victory	103
5.6	The Economic, Social, and Political Consequences of the Conquests	107
5.7	Cultural Consequences	115
6	The Late Republic: The First Century BCE	121
6.1	Personal Ambitions and the Civil Wars	123
6.2	Toward a New Order	159
6.3	Social and Cultural Transformations	169

Part II: Rome, Master of the World 185

7	The Roman World in 31–28 BCE	187
7.1	Actium and its Aftermath	189
7.2	Rome and Italy	194
7.3	The Provinces	197
7.4	Boundaries and Frontiers	203
8	Augustus: The Birth of the Imperial Regime: 29 BCE–14 CE	207
8.1	The Formation of the Principate	209
8.2	The Emperor and his Entourage	218
8.3	A Hierarchy of Offices	224
8.4	The Army and its Conquests	230
8.5	The Administration of the Empire	237
8.6	Augustus: Showman and Gamesmaster of Rome	243
8.7	Religious Policy	249
8.8	The Succession	254
9	The Julio-Claudians: The System Under Stress: 14–68 CE	257
9.1	Four Personalities: Tiberius, Gaius (Caligula), Claudius, Nero	259
9.2	The Institutions and Innovations of the Julio-Claudians	271
9.3	Development of the Administration	285