

10	The Flavians: Consolidating the Imperial Order: 68–96 CE	289
10.1	Events and Contenders	291
10.2	Interpretations	293
10.3	The Flavian Dynasty	294
10.4	Domitian and Tyranny: 81–96 CE	305
10.5	A Developing Municipal Life and a Changing Society	311
10.6	Social Changes	315
11	The Antonine Empire: 96–192 CE	319
11.1	Italo-Provincial Emperors	321
11.2	Italy in Decline, the Provinces Expanding	350
11.3	Romanization	364
11.4	A Mediterranean Economy	366
11.5	The Army	373
11.6	Spectacles and the Roman Empire	382
11.7	Religious Life	394
12	The African and Syrian Emperors: 193–235 CE	405
12.1	The Crisis of 193–197 CE	407
12.2	Septimius Severus and his Sons	408
12.3	Macrinus, Elagabalus, Severus Alexander	426
12.4	Provincial Upsurge and the Orientalization of the Empire?	431

Part III: Another Roman World: Third to Fifth Century CE 437

	Introduction to Part III: The Nature of the Times	438
13	Equilibrium: 235 CE	439
13.1	A Fragile Balance	441
13.2	Rome and Italy	443
13.3	The Western Provinces	446
13.4	The Eastern Provinces	449
13.5	Beyond the Limes	452
13.6	Balance and Instability	454
14	A Disintegrating Order: 235–284 CE	457
14.1	Sinking into Crisis: 235–260 CE	459
14.2	The Nature and Limits of the Crisis	462
14.3	The Reaction of the Imperial Government: 260–284 CE	467
15	A Different Order: 284–361 CE	471
15.1	Diocletian and the Tetrarchy: 284–305 CE	473
15.2	Constantine: 306–337 CE	477
15.3	Constantine's Sons: 337–361 CE	481
15.4	Three Emperors and their Achievements	484